UN Environment’s Environmental Rights Initiative

Regional Multi-stakeholder Consultation for Europe, Tallinn, September 3 – 4, 2018

By Alexander Juras, Chief, Civil Society Unit, UN Environment
Three main dimensions of the relationship between human rights and environmental protection:

• Environment as a pre-requisite for the enjoyment of human rights (human rights obligations of States should include duty to ensure level of environmental protection necessary to allow full exercise of protected rights);

• Procedural human rights as essential to good environmental decision-making (human rights must be implemented in order to ensure environmental protection); and

• The right to a safe, healthy and ecologically-balanced environment as a human right in itself
States’ human rights obligations relating to the environment:

• Procedural obligations
  – access to information, to participation and to remedies

• Substantive obligations
  – Life, food, health, housing, water and sanitation, etc.

• Heightened obligations for population in vulnerable situation
  – Women, children, indigenous people, etc.

Strengthening Civil Society means strengthening environmental rights and environmental rights defenders:

- Weak civil society makes defenders more vulnerable
- Shrinking spaces for civil society lead to less public awareness and makes rights abuse easier
- A strong civil society protects environmental defenders
In 2017, 207 defenders were killed – agribusiness, including coffee, palm oil and banana plantations, is the industry most associated with these attacks (Global Witness annual report, 2018)

Already in 2018, around 50 defenders have lost their lives while protecting their community’s environment and natural resources

Around 40% of those killed, harassed and intimidated are from indigenous and local communities from around the world

This includes five rangers killed in the worst attack on Virunga National Park (DR Congo) to date

This rising death toll is likely to continue if governments and businesses fail to act
UN Environment’s Policy on Environmental Defenders

• Objective: To promote greater protection for people defending their environmental rights, and identify solutions to mitigate the abuse of environmental rights which affects a growing number of people in many parts of the world

• Developed in response to growing severity of environmental rights problems and shrinking civil society space

• Three-pronged approach: 1) Speaking Out (Rapid Response Mechanism – statements, letters, social media); 2) Legal Assistance; 3) Scaling up Partnerships
Outreach: Communicating your work to a global audience and to decision-makers. Provide us with your links for important materials for www.environmentalrightsinitiative.org

Rapid Response Mechanism: eyes and ears on the ground...intelligence on emerging threats and actual incidents; unenvironment-defenders@un.org

Civil society unit contact: unepcivilsociety@un.org

Special Rapporteur / Universal Rights Group / UN Environment online resource portal: www.environment-rights.org
FURTHER RESOURCES

www.environmentalrightsinitiative.org

Environmental Rights Initiative video:

UN Environment Assembly video:

Mini-Course on Environmental Defenders:

UN Environment’s Policy on Environmental Defenders available in all six languages of the United Nations (Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian, Spanish):
https://bit.ly/2Hw04nU