About the Asia Environmental Enforcement Awards

The Asia Environmental Enforcement Awards (hereafter the 'Awards') publicly recognize and celebrate excellence in enforcement by government officials and institutions/teams combating transboundary environmental crime. The Awards are given to individuals and/or government organizations/teams that demonstrate excellence and outstanding leadership in enforcement of national laws to combat transboundary environmental crime. The thematic scope of the Awards covers any transboundary environmental crimes, such as illegal trade in wildlife, illegal trade in chemicals or waste, including plastic.

This is the fourth time the Awards will be given, and this year's Awards will be given to recipients who demonstrate excellence and leadership in one or more of the following categories: collaboration; impact; innovation; integrity; and gender leadership. There will be also a separate category for Africa-Asia cooperation in the area of illegal trade in wildlife. The 2019 Awards will be given by the United Nations Environment Programme (UN Environment) in partnership with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, the Secretariat of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora, and INTERPOL.

The category for Africa-Asia cooperation in the area of illegal trade in wildlife is sponsored by UNDP and the Global Environment Facility (GEF)-financed, World Bank-led Global Wildlife Program.

2019 Awards theme: fighting transboundary environmental crime

Transboundary environmental crime presents a serious threat in the region. Illegal trade in wildlife undermines conservation efforts, harms economies, devastates livelihoods, and compromises ecosystems on which humans depend. It also takes place on the routes between Africa and Asia at significant scale. The Asia region is as well one of the main destinations for illegally traded chemicals and waste. Millions of tonnes of hazardous waste and harmful chemicals are transported to and within Asia, having disastrous effects for human health and the environment. Governmental authorities working on environmental enforcement issues are on the front-line of efforts to combat transboundary environmental crime. The 2019 Awards will recognize and celebrate their critical role in doing so.

Eligibility for nomination

Any government official and/or government institution or team working on fighting transboundary environmental crime in Asia or on fostering Africa-Asia cooperation in the area of illegal trade in wildlife for that category, is eligible to be nominated. Relevant agencies and individuals may include, for example: customs, police, wildlife and forestry authorities, environmental agencies, environment ministries, justice ministries, multi-agency taskforces, specialized agencies, and/or public prosecutors. Teams within government institutions (e.g. units, branches, divisions etc.) are also eligible. Recipients may be awarded in their individual capacity or as representatives of institutions/teams. Non-governmental organizations and private sector individuals or institutions are not eligible. Self-nomination is permitted.

The Awards, for the categories of collaboration, impact, innovation, integrity and gender leadership, are limited to nominees from Asian countries geographically served by the Regional Office of UN Environment. These are: Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Brunei Darussalam, Cambodia, China, Democratic People's Republic of Korea, India, Indonesia, Iran (Islamic Republic of), Japan, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Malaysia, Maldives, Mongolia, Myanmar, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, Republic of Korea, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Thailand, Timor-Leste and Viet Nam.

For the category of Africa-Asia cooperation in the fight against illegal wildlife trade, nominees from any African country cooperating with a government official and/or government institution or team from any of the above-mentioned Asian countries are eligible.

Criteria for selection

The criteria outlined below will be used in selecting Award recipients. It is not necessary to meet all criteria. Excellence and leadership in one or more criteria will be considered by the Selection Panel. Awards may be given for specific criteria categories (e.g. Innovation Award) depending on nominations received and in the judgement and decision of the Selection Panel.
