Annex III : Training/Fellowships/Research

INTRODUCTION

1. The XXX Inter-Agency Advisory Committee (IAAC) for MED POL was held in Athens from 9 to 11 December 1996. All United Nations Agencies cooperating in MED POL attended the Meeting. The list of participants is attached as Annex I to this report.

Agenda item 1: Opening of the Meeting

2. Mr F. S. Civili, First Officer, Marine Scientist, opened the Meeting and welcomed the participants. He recalled the interim measures that were taken in the Coordinating Unit, namely his temporary appointment as the MED POL Coordinator following the retirement of Mr L. Jeftic, and Mr G. Gabrielides' temporary assignment to Fund and Administrative functions following the departure of Mr C. Marx. He thanked all Agencies for the continuation of excellent cooperation.

3. Mr Civili recalled the approval of MED POL Phase III and stressed the need to review and discuss the inter-agency cooperation within the framework of MAP II in view of the new phase of MED POL.

4. The IAEA representative informed the Committee that, due to health reasons, Mr Carvalho, her replacement as from January 1997, could not attend the Meeting as originally planned. In this occasion, she also thanked the Committee members for their cooperation during her term as the Head of IAEA/MESL laboratory.

5. The FAO representative informed the Committee that FAO would no longer participate in MED POL starting from 1997 due to the refocussing of his Agency's activities and the correspondent change of priorities. However, FAO would be willing to be involved in MAP activities on an ad hoc basis in the field of its core activities. He thanked all Agencies for the past cooperation.

6. Mr Civili thanked both Ms Horvat and Mr Gabrielides for their outstanding personal contributions to the MED POL programme and expressed the wish for the continuation of their support and cooperation after their departure.

Agenda item 2: Adoption of the Agenda

7. The Committee adopted the proposed agenda which appears as Annex II to this report. It was agreed to discuss the preparation of the evaluation of MED POL Phase II under Agenda item 9, "Other Business".

Agenda item 3: Present status and orientation of MAP and MED POL Phase III

8. Mr Civili introduced the agenda item by recalling the revision of the Barcelona system made in 1995-1996, the new and revised legal instruments, and MAP II. He noted that the MED POL programme, at the time of the launching of MAP (1975), occupied a predominant position over the other components in view of its solid structure and the overall orientation of MAP towards marine pollution. In the following years, a gradual refocussing of the activities of MAP had brought MED POL towards a closer relation with coastal areas, land/sea interaction and polluting land-based activities gradually transforming the approach of the programme. Finally, with the approval of MAP II and the adoption of the revised LBS

Protocol, MED POL had been invested a fundamental role in the process of sustainable development which was reflected in the formulation of its Phase III. It was therefore essential to start planning the activities of this new phase keeping in mind the new role of the programme. The task of the IAAC was therefore to review the activities and make their planning accordingly.

9. Although MED POL had collected a large number of pollution data, had produced several scientifically valid assessment documents and had substantially contributed to the capacity building process of the scientific community, it had somehow failed to fully prove its potentially important role for management and decision-making.

10. The adoption of the revised Land-Based Sources (LBS) protocol was now the next important challenge of MED POL which, gradually switching from assessment to control of pollution, could represent the effective tool for its implementation. However, this necessitated the possible re-definition of the role of the various actors, including the Cooperating Agencies, in order to fulfil the new objectives and expectations of MED POL Phase III.

11. The Participants briefly reviewed the progress made in MED POL since its start, provided their views on the achievements and drawbacks and agreed that the new phase had to take lessons from the past experience.

12. The WMO representative noted that in order to better understand the pollution problems confronted by MED POL - Phase III as well as the MED POL activities, it would be useful if "scientific lectures" on specific subjects and new developments on issues related to the MED POL objectives would be presented during Inter-governmental Meetings. He proposed that this idea could be implemented already at the next Meeting of the MED POL National Coordinators' followed by other similar meetings. The Committee approved this proposal.

13. The Committee agreed that some of the problems faced during the implementation of MED POL also originated from the sometime ineffective role of the national coordinators.

14. The IOC representative noted that, although it had in some cases lacked clear and realistic objectives, MED POL did produce many positive results among which the creation of a network of Mediterranean laboratories, capacity-building and the adoption by the Contracting Parties of many control measures. He stressed the importance of using the pollution data for management strategies within the framework of sustainable development, and suggested stronger cooperation with other programmes such as Global Investigation of Pollution in the Marine Environment (GIPME) and Global Ocean Observing System (GOOS).

15. The IAEA representative informed the Committee of the other regional initiatives such as the E.U.'s "Euro-Initiative" assistance programmes. She pointed out that the new phase should look for partners where external funding could be easier obtained for capacity-building activities.

Agenda item 4: Review of 1996 MED POL activities

16. Mr Civili reported that, in view of the very limited funds available for monitoring assistance, it was decided to finalize only those monitoring programmes which could not be formulated during precedent years. As a result, only one monitoring programme (submitted by Malta) was supported in 1996. For the remaining limited funds, it was agreed to purchase small equipment and chemicals for Egypt, Algeria, Libya and Morocco, as suggested by the results of the DQA programmes implemented in those countries.

17. The Committee reviewed the lists of ongoing research projects, noting that too many of them were still under negotiation, together with training and fellowships that had been supported in 1996. These are attached as Annex III to the report.

18. Mr Aksel briefly reviewed the activities of data processing, stressing the receipt of limited data in 1996. He informed the Committee of the completion of the data processing project financed by the Italian government, of the ongoing work on the development of a marine pollution data-entry system, of new formats and codes, and of the utilization of Internet and its promotion in the region.

19. The IAEA representative, referring to a training course on the processing of MED POL data organized in the framework of the project financed by Italy, stressed the need in future for better cooperation and coordination with the MESL laboratory regarding the selection of candidates for similar courses.

20. The WHO representative briefed the Committee on the activities carried out in 1996 including a meeting on toxics reduction which was held in October in Marseille in cooperation with UNEP/IE. He informed the Participants about the progress made on the LBS questionnaires where the results showed that countries had submitted either incomplete questionnaires or none at all. Only two countries (Algeria and Turkey) completed the LBS questionnaires on the industrial discharges. Two national training courses (in Morocco and Croatia) were held in 1996. Technical assistance and equipment were provided to Tunisia and six research proposals were accepted for financial support.

21. The FAO representative informed the Committee that, in view of its Agency's withdrawal, no new activities were initiated in 1996, and the pilot biomonitoring programme that was launched was expected to be completed by the end of the year. This activity would certainly continue as envisaged in MED POL - Phase III. A report would be prepared on the biomonitoring exercise and a workshop would be organized in spring to assess the results and decide on future activities.

22. The WMO representative informed the Committee that, due to lack of funds, only few activities were carried out in 1996. An expert mission to Morocco, carried out in June on the establishment of a new monitoring station for air-borne pollution, produced good results in spite of the organizational difficulties faced during the mission.

23. All the Agencies emphasized the fact that the very limited funds received in 1996 had indeed crippled many of the MED POL activities carried out by them. The Committee also agreed that delays in the preparation and approval of the budget revisions had caused great difficulties in the implementation of their programmes.

24. The IAEA representative briefed the Committee on the Data Quality Assurance and other activities carried out in 1996. Two intercomparison exercises for determination of trace metals in sediment and biota were completed. Over 35 MED POL laboratories participated and reported data. The follow-up action included the identification of badly-performing laboratories and the subsequent organization in Monaco from 25 November to 13 December 1996 of a group training course for determination of trace metals in marine environment samples. Based on the outcome of an intercomparison exercise on trace organic contaminants in mussels, an evaluation report was prepared which showed a significant improvement of the quality of the data reported by the MED POL laboratories. Two new intercomparison exercises had commenced during 1996: IAEA-140/TM (trace metals in seaplant) and IAEA-140/OC (trace organics in sea plant). Over 30 MED POL laboratories had reported their results for both exercises. Some of these exercises were co-financed from other sources. A new intercomparison sample, IAEA-383, for determination of trace organic contaminants (chlorinated pesticides, PCBs, petroleum hydrocarbons, PAHs, and sterols) had been prepared and was ready to be distributed in early 1997.

25. A new certified material for trace organic contaminants, total mercury and methyl mercury, (IAEA-142) in mussel homogenate was produced and was regularly distributed to MED POL laboratories. Over 600 standards were also available for calibration of analytical instrumentation.

26. One group training for the determination of trace metals in marine environmental samples was organized in Morocco. Two group training courses were organized at IAEA in Monaco on the determination of trace organic contaminants (May, 1996), and determination of trace metals and instrument maintenance (November/December, 1996). In total, nine trainees received training.

27. Regular maintenance service visits included laboratories in Cyprus, Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco and Croatia. DQA missions were carried out to Tunisia, Egypt, and Morocco and planned for 1997 to Cyprus, Malta, Syria, and again to Egypt. Split-sample analyses were performed for Cyprus.

28. Ms Horvat reminded the Committee that the maintenance services to the MED POL equipment in Mediterranean laboratories would cease in the second half of 1997 due to the termination of the post of the maintenance engineer. She reported that a list of possible alternatives related to the maintenance of the equipment would be submitted to the Coordinating Unit.

29. The development and optimization of Reference Methods continued with the revision of the methods dealing with determination of trace metals, chlorinated compounds and petroleum hydrocarbons in sediments and biota.

30. Ms Horvat drew attention of the Committee to the fact that UNEP Environment Fund had reduced its support to IAEA for the production of reference methods from 600,000 USD to 50,000 USD deciding to finance only the preparation of methods related to the implementation of GPA. She informed the Committee that a recent contract with IOC ensured a financial support of additional 50,000 USD for this activity.

31. The IOC representative informed the Committee that, due to lack of funds, no major activities were carried out in 1996. Ten were the ongoing research projects, two of them just initiated. Two projects resulted in an MTS report on eutrophication modelling. IOC support to the GIPME group of experts for the preparation of reference methods continued.

Agenda item 5: Development of MED POL Phase III activities

32. Mr Civili, recalling the objectives of Phase III, informed the Committee of work on the formulation of the two new conceptual approach on monitoring, namely the "trends" and "compliance" monitoring. Both needed the preparation of operational documents that would be presented to the National Coordinators' Meeting. He reported that a consultant had already produced a draft operational document on "trends".

33. Mr Civili briefed the Committee on the planned operational aspects of these two types of monitoring. He stated that a number of "target" countries would be identified, where a full three/four year programme of capacity-building would be prepared. After that, the assistance would be reduced, on the assumption that the country would then be capable to carry out the programme by itself. The countries would still have monitoring programmes which would contain all the details of trend and compliance monitoring for which report should be prepared and submitted to the MEDU.

34. Mr Gabrielides, in this line, explained that future monitoring assistance to countries should support the redesign of national monitoring programmes that would suite the needs of each individual country. Assistance should continue on purchase of equipment rather than chemicals. Similarly, the countries should be encouraged to establish their own national marine pollution databank.

35. One of the immediate implications of the new approach would be the limiting of the flow of marine pollution data to the Secretariat to trends data only. Compliance-specific and other pollution data types, in the new phase, would be the responsibility of individual countries.

36. Mr Gabrielides introduced the first draft of the operational document on "trend monitoring". He briefed the Committee on the historical background on this methodology (which was already used by ICES for some years), mentioning particularly the four FAO/UNEP sub-regional workshops that took place during the past two years that had laid down the ground work in the region. The Committee briefly commented on the document and agreed to provide detailed comments by 31 December 1996. The document would be later discussed by a small group of experts in order to be presented to the National Coordinators' Meeting.

37. The IOC representative drew attention to the need for inclusion of coastal litter and petroleum hydrocarbons in sediments in the trend monitoring parameters as it was becoming a serious problem in the southern Mediterranean countries. He also informed the Committee that the GOOS could contribute to the building of the national compliance monitoring system.

38. Referring to the subject of data quality assurance for compliance monitoring, the IAEA representative stated that the development of a specific QA programme was urgent and asked for close cooperation from WHO on the subject of effluents.

39. Referring to the future activities of data processing as support measures, Mr Civili confirmed that only trend monitoring data would be processed at the Secretariat. However, data processing would still continue to assist the countries who need to develop their own marine pollution databanks, or temporarily process their data at MEDU, if needed. Support for fellowships and training would continue as funds permit.

40. The IAEA representative believed that group training and, alternatively, training in loco, were more productive than the individual training courses and suggested more use of it. This view was shared by the Committee.

41. After a detailed discussion on the development of the research component starting from 1997, the Committee identified the following six research areas and the respective competences:

- eutrophication modelling (physical and ecological) (IOC and IAEA);
- bio-monitoring techniques (MEDU);
- atmospheric deposition, in particular, on local-scale modelling and the role in the sea biochemistry (WMO);
- microbiological techniques (in particular, evaluation of standards applied to recreational waters, and establishment of common quality criteria for recreational waters) (WHO);
- pollution prevention from selected land-based sources (WHO); and
- biogeochemical cycles (IOC and IAEA).

42. The new research component would be based on joint cooperation between institutes from developing countries (to which the projects would be assigned) and institutes from developed countries. It was the opinion of the Committee that this formula could more easily attract funds from outside sources.

43. Mr Civili introduced a recently approved GEF project on the "Formulation of a Strategic Action Programme for the Mediterranean Sea to Address Pollution from Land-Based Activities" which would be coordinated by MAP. He distributed a copy of the project document and described the background of its formulation and the workplan and timetable for its implementation including the main expected outputs. It was noted that the project would produce a Strategic Programme for the region (with elements for the formulation of national action plans), the identification of "Hot Spots", and a Transboundary Diagnostic Analysis. This one-year project would terminate in December 1997 with a donor conference which would examine the possible funding of selected activities. The members of the Committee expressed interest to participate in the project; in particular, the WMO representative would be involved in the evaluation of airborne pollution in the region.

44. Referring to the identification of "hot spots", the WHO representative, technically in charge of this activity, suggested a close cooperation with IAEA on the topic of radioactivity, since this agency did hold an extensive database.

45. Referring to the LBS enforcement, the WHO representative informed the Committee that it had been suggested that METAP III would provide a contribution of USD 200,000 for the formulation of a programme of national inspectors.

46. The IOC representative informed the Committee that the Global investigation for Pollution in the Marine Environment Programme (GIPME) had formulated a strategic plan for scientific support for LBS control and regulation. This could also contribute to the LBS enforcement in the Mediterranean.

Agenda item 6: 1997 Budget and proposals for 1998-1999

47. The Committee reviewed the 1997 MED POL activities and apportioned (to each agency and MEDU) the budget approved by the Contracting Parties during their Extraordinary Meeting in Montpellier (1-4 July 1996) as follows (for easy reference, the relevant page from the annex IV of the report of the Meeting (UNEP(OCA)/MED IG.8/7) is indicated next to the activity):

48. The Committee agreed that the approved baseline survey of open Mediterranean waters was important, and further efforts should be made to seek additional sources of funds.

49. Referring to the subject of the 1998-1999 budget, Mr Civili stated that due to the economical difficulties being currently faced by all Mediterranean countries, and in particular by the EU countries, no real increase in the budget was expected for the next biennium.

50. Mr Gabrielides, referring to the new planned presentation of the budget, informed the Committee that, as far as feasible, future budgets should now be presented by project, as decided by the Contracting Parties. This would require preparation of a completely new outlook also for the MED POL budget.

51. The Committee agreed that the next Meeting of IAAC, which would be held before the Meeting of National Coordinators, should discuss the 1998-1999 budget in detail.

Agenda item 7: Preparation of Meeting of National Coordinators

52. Mr Civili proposed to inform the national coordinators on the new suggested procedures for the implementation of MED POL as soon as possible, particularly on the new research and monitoring approaches, since they would be the main subjects to be discussed at the Meeting.

53. The Committee agreed with the proposal and also confirmed the decision to address the "scientific lectures" (see paragraph 12.) in connection with the Coordinators' Meeting.

Agenda item 8: Preparation of project revision

54. Mr Gabrielides, in his interim Fund and Administrative Officer functions, informed the Committee on the UNEP's decision to extend the current project for one more year in its current form. He informed that the new revision was being prepared and asked the Agencies to urgently provide the necessary information on the utilization of unspent 1996 funds.

Agenda item 9: Other Business

55. Under this Agenda item, the IAEA and IOC representatives briefed the Committee on the activities planned by their respective Agencies regarding the 1998 Year of Oceans.

56. Mr Civili recalled the need to prepare in 1997 an administrative and scientific evaluation report of MED POL Phase-II. In view of the lack of specifically earmarked funds for such an activity, he suggested to use the funds of the budget reserved for "Experts for review and evaluation of MED POL activities" ($20,000) approved by the Contracting Parties. The evaluation would require full cooperation from all Agencies as well as the recruitment of appropriate consultants. He suggested to soon prepare and circulate a draft outline of the evaluation report to all Agencies for comments so that it could be presented to the National Coordinators' Meeting.

Agenda item 10: Adoption of the Report

57. The draft Report of the Meeting was reviewed by the Committee but not approved because of lack of time. It was agreed that all Agencies would send comments on the text by 7 January 1997 so that the Report could be finalized and adopted. After the comments and the amendments of the participants were inserted, the Report was approved by the Committee.

Agenda item 11: Closure of the Meeting

58. Mr Civili thanked the participants for their valuable contribution to the success of the Meeting and to the formulation of the new activities of MED POL Phase III. He closed the Meeting at 13,00 hours of 11 December 1996.
