Utthan, a non-profit organisation, working for the past 40 years with a mission to initiate gender-sensitive grassroot processes of empowerment among the most vulnerable communities in rural Gujarat, India.
GUJARAT’s Intervention context - geographic, socio-economic, gender, governance

- Longest coastline in India~1600km. of rich biodiversity
- Rise in extreme weather events; cyclones and prolonged droughts
- High industrialization, construction of dams, increasing commercial fishing and agriculture
- More than 41 ports and 90 percent of the state’s Special Economic Zones located in region

- No decentralized governance of coastal resources → conflicts between various stakeholders
Women worse off than men across all social and economic categories

- Increasing income inequality and marginalization of artisanal fishers, salt pan workers, small agricultural farmers, daily wage labourers, livestock herders and migrant labourers and women

- Child sex ratio, secondary school enrolment and formal employment particularly adverse for women

Last 25 years of Utthan’s empowerment mobilizational approach →
Three Women’s Federations with over 7300 members

Women’s collective action → a significant role in securing water, sanitation, livelihood, land and property rights along with safety and security of women and girls.
Since late 2019, the COVID-19 pandemic has spread swiftly over the world, posing serious threats to food security and nutrition.

Decreased earnings and higher food costs → placing food out of reach for many people

Pull back to efforts to achieve SDGs on Zero Hunger & Gender Equality
Lockdown was only the beginning of misery for those already on the margins

Government of India promulgated a Nation-wide lockdown as a preventive measure. Despite the fact that food value chains and related activities were spared, severe challenges experienced
Impact of the Covid-19 pandemic in coastal areas of Gujarat

• While Government intent was good, a huge gap remained in meeting the total food needs. Added burden of reverse migrants keen to return home, as cities shut-down and efforts to shelter and feed them, or provide daily work, were limited.

• Hunger and mental stress

• Women and girls suffered further distress:
  - Unpaid household and care work increased
  - Ate last and least as food availability fell
  - Were the last to seek treatment when their health failed and experienced more poverty
  - Increased violence

TO BOOST
- Social solidarity between households
- Energise local economy

- Rural community-centred, gender responsive approach in procurement and distribution
- Prioritizing the most vulnerable when directing relief and livelihood support
- Building alliances with different stakeholder groups for effective interventions
Rural community-centred, gender responsive approach in relief procurement and distribution: PEOPLE TO PEOPLE SOCIAL SOLIDARITY MODEL

Immediate support, local procurement, money circulation: Food grain distribution and Masks

- Food grains for relief purchased from local women farmers.
- Relief including food grains, soap, masks and menstrual hygiene products to 7785 rural households across 130 coastal villages.

INR 10,12,883 (USD 13600) worth of food grains were bought from 61 women farmers

Face masks worth of INR 2,77,500 (USD 3700) bought from 68 women tailors

Social capital building and boosting social solidarity

- Village community leadership mobilized towards this end. Youth and women from 55 villages were engaged as volunteers to support the process, also trained and equipped for Covid-19 prevention and care work.

Kitchen-garden kit including seeds & bio inputs to grow vegetables. Initial support to 1956 households led to nutrition for nearly 8000 households over a year.

Scaleup and share the experience in Networks

- Utthan shared experiences in Working Group for Women & Land ownership, Inter Agency group & Rapid Rural Community Response to COVID-19 (RCRC), the latter was featured as one of the top 50 last-mile responders in India (2021), in the World Economic Forum’s COVID Response Alliance for Social Entrepreneurs

Local procurement and share while building social capital within the community
Prioritizing the most vulnerable when directing relief and livelihood support

Vulnerable families were identified with the support of village leaders, Women Federation members and local government representatives. Vulnerability assessment was based on house type, control over private or public resources, impact on livelihood, families with disabled and non-earning members, and women headed households.

Livelihood support to marginal fishers, farmers, migrant families and livestock keepers.

Women members of coastal village groups also brainstormed on improving income-generation within existing work, as well as alternative income-generating opportunities.

- 78 artisanal fisher women and 32 women fish traders provided fishing nets and weighing scales.
- 1400+ women farmers dependent on rain fed agriculture were supported with local seed and bio inputs for the monsoon crop and 230 farmers were supported for the winter crop.
- 17 migrant families helped to set up rope-making units and 15 poor families helped to sustain their livestock businesses.

Participatory and community led model of identifying "vulnerable" along with building economic resilience through livelihood enhancement.
Building alliances with different stakeholder groups for effective interventions

Establishing strong dialogue and feedback mechanism with the government

- A culture of establishing strong dialogue and feedback mechanism with the Government was encouraged at all stages of the relief intervention.
- Support government through participatory exercises & public disclosure of vulnerable households selected for relief distribution

Linkages with government health cadre in the second wave, when there was a spike in rural infections and deaths from Covid-19, provided timely support in prevention and treatment of Covid-19 infections.

Data on gaps in accessing reliefs like food rations under government relief distribution schemes, provided by Utthan and village leaders to relevant government officials, helped several vulnerable households gain their entitled benefits.

Information on mandated reliefs and opportunities like the rural employment guarantee programme helped communities gain some income security.

Alarming rise in gender-based violence during the pandemic, the three Women’s Federations provided counsel and support to 350 women and girls from April 2020 to July 2021.
Lessons learned

Lens of ensuring support to severely impacted & those with pre-existing vulnerabilities.

- Local grain procurement grains ensured farmgate purchase leading to cash circulation in the communities while supporting food security.
- Sustainable farming approach based Kitchen garden improved nutritional needs of the marginalized.
- Strong women leadership and institutions at village & district level became important catalysts in preparing, implementing & monitoring interventions in an inclusive way.
- Regular monitoring and consultation with local women and youth representatives helped to assess and respond to evolving needs as the pandemic progressed.
- Teaming up with government agencies particularly frontline health workers increased their involvement and efficiency of services.
- Need of Counseling for women and girls suffering from gender-based violence increases during pandemic.
- Grassroots based organisations like Utthan play a vital role in facilitating effective collaboration between community leaders, national civil society networks, government stakeholders and donors, for a more effective, efficient, sustainable and equitable disaster response and management.
