Dear Madame,

Dear Sir,

Re: Application of EAM Environmental to the UNEP Global Mercury Partnership

On behalf of EAM Environmental, I would like to herewith to apply to the UNEP Global Mercury Partnership.

EAM Environmental is a manufacturer of hazardous waste spill control products and systems based on these products. Among our products is Mercury Magnet™, a unique magnetic amalgamation powder for the collection of all forms of mercury bearing wastes. We have strived for over 30 years to provide innovative and the best technology available. Once treated with Mercury Magnet®, mercury bearing wastes are no longer in a state where exposure is a risk to the environment. It then can be treated to be recycled and prevented from being released into the environment by landfill burial.

Our vision has been to provide quality spill control products that not only neutralize and chemically treat the hazardous waste, but reduce risk to the individuals providing the remediation. Through training and continuing to educate, we feel our products can help in the prevention of widespread hazardous conditions while treating wastages. Even with the best available measures in place, having a proven and effective line of spill control products can aid in protecting the environment.

We believe the UNEP Global Mercury Partnership shares our same values and a clear commitment to achieving a global goal of an improved environment from the release of mercury wastes. We feel we can add value as a strategic partner in providing our technology to organizations dealing with this unique hazardous waste.
