

Panel Session IV: Playing for the Planet: How Youth and Sports can unite to deliver on the Global Goals

Short description:

If we are to deliver on the sustainable development goals, young people need to be at the heart of the conversation. This panel session will showcase how the combination of sports, video gaming, youth and education are coming together to inspire young people into action as part of UN Environment's new agenda on education and youth. At this event, representatives from the International Olympic Committee, the Scouts and games industry experts will be sharing the action they are undertaking in this arena.
