Did you know that green and digital technologies are increasingly being used to prevent and reduce consumer food waste? They offer innovative solutions and new opportunities for business, society and people. However, technology alone will not solve the food waste problem. They require an enabling environment to thrive and to fully unlock their potential.

Information in this infographic is based on the UNEP project: “Build Back Better: Using Green and Digital Technologies to Reduce Food Waste at Consumer Level”